OUTLINE OF POLICIES CHERISHED BY THE DEAD PRESIDENT.

REPUBLIC SPECIAL.

nade by President Roosevelt yesterday that all the members of Mr. McKinley's Cabinet should remain with him throughout his adninistration, is the first step in the direction of carrying out the pledge made by he new President of adhering to the polldes of Mr. McKinley. The request of Mr. Roosevelt will be accepted in the same spirit in which it was tendered, and it is inet for a long time, certainly not until after the assembling of Congress. An extra session of the Senate will not have to be called. The personal desires of Cabinet officers will be laid aside and the members will apply themselves to aiding in making successful the administration of their nev chief

President McKinley, after his inaugura tion on March 4 last, in a heart-to-hear with his Cabinet members, inviting them to remain with him, generously gave to them the credit for whatever commenda ion his administration had received from the country. So Mr. Roosevelt begins the carrying out of the dead President's poliies with a Cabinet who knew the intention as to the details of those policies thoroughly and had aided in originating them. Opposed to Hanna-Payne Bill.

The principal difference between President consevelt and President McKinley, thus faleveloped, is that the former is opposed to the Hanna-Payne ship subsidy bill. Wheth er he will actively oppose its passage is un certain, but it is very well understood that he is opposed to the ship subsidy. As to general policies, it is not doubted that he will pursue the course of his prede

There were many great problems that the late President and his administration were solving by policies that were determined upon long ago, and some of which the country had indorsed by its suffrage. Other prob lems were in the process of solution, which carried with them policies that were less lefinitely known, but were clearly under good, and still others for which there were colicies that opportunity had not offered to fully present.

Among the latter was the great problem of reciprocity-that about which the business world is to-day deeply interested. In President McKinley's notable speech at Buf falo the day before he was shot, he made this question the foremost of four upor which he touched. It was foremost in his nind during the last five or six months. His policy on this great question had not been as thoroughly known as that upor me other questions, but the public was watching keenly the developments of the President's ideas in that direction, and when ne spoke at Buffalo found him committed to a positive step. Both in his speech at Buffalo and in speeches on his recent Western trip the President said that the country could not repose in fancied security that we can forever sell everything and buy lit-

> .The policy so clearly announced at Buffalo had not been just determined in his mind. He urged it in his last annual message, and before Congress adjourned he talked with members of that body about the ratification of the commercial agreenents then before it. He could not pur the matter then, because of the many other great questions that were pressing With these partly out of the way he had concluded to make reciprocity the most importent subject in his annual message to Congress this fall. Mr. Roosevelt has comhis message to Congress will contain a full discussion of it. The President touched upon three other great questions at Buffalo. He said that aid should be extended the merchant marine, so that there may be more American ships to do the big business that is blessing the country; that an inter-oceanic canal should be built, and that the construction of a Pacific cable, connecting the island possessions of the United States could not longer be postponed. All these questions will be before Congress at the next session and Mr. Roosevelt will delcuse them in his

Where Roosevelt and Lodge Differ. On the important subject of reciprocity Mr. Roosevelt is declared to be at issue with his closest friend, Senator Lodge, who has not shown a friendly disposition in the Senate to the treaties that were before the upper house at the last session. On this subject Mr. Lodge cannot represent the new administration in the Senate, it is pointed out, with Mr. Roosevelt earnestly committed to carrying forward the com

The Cuban and Philippine problems are regarded as more or less settled, although grave questions connected with these countris will arise, and there will also remain the working out of details. Mr. Roose velt's methods of meeting the new question veit's methods of meeting the new questions and of handling the details, must necessarily be different from those of the dead President, although they will all be directed toward the policy which the former President established, and which has been approved by the country. President McKinley regarded the Filipinos as "wards of the nation." He thought that the obligations of this country as the guardian of the wards should be honestly fulfilled with the object of the greatest benefit to the people who he thought would advance in culture and citizenship.

The man whose military career in Cuba brought him more prominently to the front than anything else may yet be the one to permanently settle some mighty questions regarding that island. President McKinley had a clear policy on the Chinese question. This policy was the assured there will be no changes in the Cab-inet for a long time, certainly not until course, showing confidence in the willingness of the Imperial Government to do that which is right, and protecting the diversi-fied interests of the United States without harsh treatment of China. Mr. McKinley's policy toward China was so conservative that he even declared his willingness to sub-mit the matter of indemnities to the International Court of Arbitration for settle-ment. Mr. McKinley gave his approval to arbitration for nearly all questions.

President McKinley gave careful atten-tion always to questions involving the South American countries, and rejoiced in their happiness and prosperity. In his last mes-sage he discussed the relations of the Uni-ted States with all these countries, speaking of them by name. He desired the en-largement of postal facilities with these countries, because it would bring the United States in closer relation with them. He had for some time, through the State Dezil to change conditions that weighed heavily on the export trade of this country with Brazil. Representations were made last r and brought about some amelioration.

The ever-recurring Alaskan boundary mestions and the agreement made as to the abrogation of features of the Clayton-Bultreaty are matters that President sevelt will deal with in his intercourse with Great Britain. Secretary Hay is in communication with the British Government regarding the agreement and the amendments to it by the Senate. President McKinley was doing all in his power to restore the former friendship of spain and the United States and to reaffirm the cordial ties of old days. President Roosevelt will no doubt follow the sevelt's request that the Cabinet remain with him would indicate that there will be no material change in the policy of will be no material change in the policy of President McKinley regarding appoint-ments. Mr. McKinley was making few changes in officeholders, and it was his in-tention to allow officials to remain, where there was no just cause for their removal. Mr. Roosevelt will, it is expected, appoint some of his friends to office as vacancies come about in a regular way, but it is not believed there will be any rapid changing. President McKinley desired liberality in ns to the veteran soldlers of the country, enforcement of the civil service laws and the building of a hall of records in this city. It is felt that Mr. Roosevelt's position e matters will not be much different from that of his predecessor.

Pathers brought up their children and held them over the bier for a fleeting glance at the upturned face. A sleening its little mind could not comprehend. Tollers came from the factories and, dinner palls in hand, trooped by the bler of him whom they called their benefactor and their friend. Now and then knots of school children hurried past, awe-struck at the gloom of this chamber of death. Often the guarding soldiers were compelled to step forward and gently restrain a hand that sought a bud from off the flower-decked casket.

It was plain that a great flood of emotion was welling up in the hearts of these sorrowing people. Strong men made no conand tearful eyes telling the sense of personal bereavement which had come upon them. Many women wept, and during the afternoon one young girl gave way to her feelings by loud walls which echoed through the darkened corridors.

As the people hurried by they gave expression to suppressed exclamations of anguish at the sight of the pinched face lying there in the coffin. It was not the face they had known so well, and almost without exception the people turned away, regretful that they had not retained in their minds that picture of manly vigor which they knew so well. Many of his nearest friends re frained from looking upon the face, preferring to preserve the memory of Late in the afternoon an aged man lean ing upon two crutches, which he managed with difficulty, appeared at the door through which the people were making their exit He asked the sentry to allow him to enter and when the soldier refused, mying that he had received orders to allow nobody through that door, the old man stood back the picture of woe. In a short time he again asked the young sentry, in pleading tones, to allow him entrance through the doorway, saying that in his feeble condition he was not able to stand in the line, which at that time was extending fully a mile from the entrance. "I fought in his regiment during the war," he said, "and I just want to lay this flag on his coffin and then keep it as reminder of the time I saw him last." "Take it in," said the sentry, and the veteran hobbled into the hall. When he got inside he had more trouble, and was compelled to explain his errand several times Finally the line passing the comn was stopped long enough to allow the old man to step to its side for a glance into the coffin, and to lay his tiny flag on its glass front. Then he turned back with the crowd, hugging the now sanctified flag tightly beneath his coat.

At one time a group of schoolgirls approached the casket. There were six of them and they came three abreast. One in the forward row leaned owr for a look, and gently disengaging from the bosom of her gently disengaging from the bosom of her dress a scarlet geranium, laid it gently on the top of the wreaths that were resting there. ## CATARRH OF KIDNEYS

Quickly Develops Into Bright's Disease.

PE-RU-NA GURES CATARRH WHEREVER LOCATED.

John Herziger, son of Alderman Her tiger of Necnah, Wis., and vice president of the Neenah Young Men's Club, writes in ompany of Columbus. Ohio, the following: "After suffering for two years with kidney trouble, I received relief and a ily cured-such was the experience of John Herziger of Wisconsin.

This experience has been repeated many times. Not only in Wisconsin, but in every State in the Union. It was indeed a lucky day for this young man when his attention was called to Peruna. What would have been the result had he continued suffering on and fooling away precious time with other remedies no man can tell. But it is almost certain that it would have ended in incurable Bright's disease of the kidneys, which sooner or later would have proved fatal.

Peruna is a sure cure for incipient Bright's disease of the kidneys. Taken in the early stages of this disease, it cures permanently Bright's disease always begins with entarrh of the kidneys. Peruna cures catarrh wherever located.

Congressman Bankhead's Statement. Congressman J. H. Bankhead of Ala-bama, one of the most influential members of the House of Representatives, in a letter written from Washington, D. C. gives his indorsement to the great catarrh remedy, Peruna, in the following words:

"Your Peruna is one of the best medicines I ever tried, and no family should be without your remarkable remedy. As a tonic and a catarrh cure I know of nothing better."—J. H. Bankhead.

cine, Peruna.

"For mosths I was unable to work on account of a severe pain in my back, and when I was able to do anything I was in pain and distressed most of the time.

"Hearing so much of the good results people had obtained through the use of Peruna I determined to give it a trial, and it was a lucky day for me when I did so. I am well now and it only took a few bottles of Peruna."

John Herziger, 307 Commercial street, Los Angeles, Cal., writes:
"I came here a few years ago suffering with catarrh of the kidneys, in search of health. I thought that the climate would cure me, but found that I was mistaken, but what the climate could not do Peruna could and did do. Seven weeks' trial convinced me that I had the right medicine and I was then a well man. I know of at least twenty friends and members of the lodge to which I belong who have been cured of catarrh, blinder and kidney trouble through the use of Peruna, and it has a best of friends in this city."—Samuel R. Sprecher, Junior Beadle Court Angelina, No. 3422, I. O. O. F., 236 High street, Los Angeles, Cal., writes:

WILL BE PRIVATE SECRETARY. Eventually William Loeb Is to Suc ceed Mr. Cortelyou. REPUBLIC SPECIAL.

Washington, Sept. 18.—William Loeb, pre ident Roseveit's private secretary, was at the White House to-day looking into the details of his work there. Secretary Cortelyou for a time will remain in losing up the private business of the late President and rendering such assistance as he can to Mrs. McKinley. In the meantime Mr. Loeb will act as secretary in Wash ngton.

President Roosevelt has urgede Mr. Cor telvou to remain in the office of secretary the present. Eventually, however, it is probable that Mr. Cortelyou will accept another important place at the hands of the President or accept one of many attractive offers he has received to enter business. He may undertake the preparation of a life of may undertake the preparation of a life of President McKinley.

Mr. Cortelyou is generally regarded as one of the most competent men who have illed the office of President's secretary. He is a lawyer and the late President intended at the close of his term to provide him a life position in his profession. It is settled that he will serve for a while as secretary to President Roosevelt, but, as stated, probably will accept a place of equal responsibility and compensation outside the White-House before the end of the present executive term.

LECTURED ON RIVER TRAFFIC-

Commission lectured last night at a meeting of the Engineers' Club, at No. 1809 Locust street, on the history of the river traffic and engineering. He spoke of the development of the traffic up to 1880 and the gradual decrease from that time to the present, and named the reasons for the decrease. The lecture was illustrated by stereopticon views.
